

LOFTwall™
dividers for living & working

livingspace

In the last decade, urban and metropolitan areas have seen a resurgence in popularity as residents who work or live in the downtown areas are becoming more accustomed to living in open lofts within older buildings. Many loft owners are enticed by the idea of open living but become overwhelmed with living in an open space. Modern loft design should create a functional and comfortable floorplan within the space for relaxation, entertaining, storage and working. These different areas can easily be defined without breaking up the space into rooms with the use of divider screens.

Dividing Spaces Within the Home

Traditional lofts are a single room which houses all of your living quarters. This can make entertaining quite difficult as your bedroom flows into your living room which flows into your kitchen and bathroom. People living in lofts love the open space but are challenged in creating boundaries between spaces for privacy or function. Adding a room divider or a partition to a loft can bring a much needed separation between living room and bedroom or living room and home office. This simple solution allows residents to have the privacy of a bedroom while still having an open feeling of a Loft.

Separation By Design

Many lofts spaces allow residents to use their own imagination and develop their own design taste. Why should the design of a home environment be hindered by unmovable barriers with colors that don't match your furniture? Room dividers allow a space to flow with the rest of the furniture because it is likely to be placed in a high traffic area and it could become a center point of the room. It is not only important to have color and design options with a room divider but it is also important to have the ability for lighting. Some loft spaces may have excessive natural light and some have very little natural light, room dividers with transparent panels allow lighting to pass through for an open feeling or use opaque panels to block light for more intimate occasion.

Keeping it Lightweight & Easy

If you have an open living space that requires privacy on certain occasions such as an overnight guest sleeping on a couch then portable room dividers are convenient and practical. They are good for providing a temporary living space or workspace. The huge advantage to a portable wall or room divider is that you can literally rearrange the size of your space at a moments notice. No longer are you required to have a 10x13 bedroom, you can make it 15x20 by just adjusting where the divider sits. Get more living room furniture? Move the wall over and you can accommodate for it. Not only are they lightweight and easy to move, they are simple to put together.

LOFTwall is an innovative divider solution for living and work spaces. A modular partition wall comprised of aluminum frames and customizable panels. LOFTwall is a solution for anyone facing the challenges of privacy, creative design and flexibility. LOFTwall is a modular, lightweight & easy to assemble divider.